Hikertrash Life On The Pacific

This was a great account of the ins and outs of life as a thru hiker on the PCT. The story is a lighthearted piece as narrated by a young couple who decided to hike the PCT during a trip to Asia. The writing does not delve into deep reflections of life and meaning but its a very honest reflection filled with details.

Hikertrash: Life on the Pacific Crest Trail: Miller, Erin ...

Hikertrash: Life on the Pacific Crest Trail is the story of Erin Miller and her husband Carl, who set out on the 2,650 mile trail from Mexico to Canada. The book was generally good, though it never quite decided if it would rather be a recounting of the logistics of their hike or a gossipy volume about their fellow hikers.

Overview. Teetering awkwardly on the brink of insanity, unable to handle life in snowy, cold, ultra-conservative North Idaho, Carl and Erin sold their house and set out in search of a new place to call home. Suddenly finding themselves completely free of responsibilities, jobless, and with a little spare cash in the bank, it didn't take long before their serious search for a new life took some unexpected twists and turns.

Bored and fed up with life, staring down a 50th birthday, Mike Tyler was looking for a change. Life had become routinized and unexciting. Maybe it was a mid-life crisis, or maybe just a yearning for one last big adventure. Mike decides to try hiking from Mexico to Canada on the Pacific Crest Trail, just to see what happens.
